Council Reviews Law Firm's Analysis on Maglev DEIS

by Cathie Meetre

At the Greenbelt City Council meeting on May 10, Councilmember Leta Mach moved and council adopted a motion to authorize City Manager Nicole Ard to draft a letter that presents comments on the maglev Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) from the environmental law firm of Jill Grant and Associates. The letter will be presented for council signature at the meeting of May 23, with Byrd noting that the vote at that time would be final because responses to the DEIS are due the next day.

Grant presented a summary of her group's work to date, noting they were close to finished. She said that the comments were currently 200 pages. She summarized by saying that the city's comments will address the enormous cost and inadequate benefit of the project, the extensive environmental effects and the lack of concern for environmental justice. She also noted the project's failure to observe existing laws or to provide adequate information and analysis on the impact on the environment and the communities affected.

She provided a number of specific instances. Under National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) requirements, for example, the project has consistently failed to provide all the requested information, while data that they did provide was inadequately analyzed. The project, according to Grant, has also failed to comply with historic preservation requirements and Department of Transportation regulations, among other regulatory constraints. As Grant succinctly put it, "So much disruption for so little benefit."

Misleading Analyses

Grant noted specific instances where data are not just lacking but actively misleading, citing as an example a cost-benefit analysis that depends on ridership and travel time statistics to justify the cost. She also notes that although the DEIS is required to say how damage to environmentally sensitive areas will be mitigated, no such strategies

Public Works Tackled Covid; Looks Forward to Future

by Diane Oberg

The Public Works Department has a wide-ranging set of responsibilities, including maintaining the city's roads, buildings and vehicles; implementing environmental improvements and sustainability practices; maintaining and beautifying the city's green spaces and outdoor recreational facilities; waste collection, and snow and ice removal, among many others. Department staff and the Greenbelt City Council met on April 21 to review the proposed budget for the department for fiscal year 2022 (FY22), which begins July 1.

The budget allocates $3.9 million to this department, an increase of 3.6 percent from the amount budgeted in the current year. Despite the department's active role in battling Covid-19, Public Works actually spent 1 percent less in the current fiscal year than was budgeted.

Public Works is also responsible for the city parks budget, although that is officially reported under the Recreation and Parks budget account. The $1.4 million proposed for FY22 is up 8 percent from the FY21 adopted budget. Other department expenditures are reported in special accounts such as for the city

Letters to the Editor

Open Letter To City Council

Honorable City Council Members and City Manager Ard:

It is important for members of the City Council to recognize their constituency. Former Mayors Jordan and Davis have always inquired as to the address of public commentators during city council meetings and work sessions. More recently however, Mayor Byrd has moved away from this practice which has resulted in confusion among city residents. If non-Greenbelt residents are called upon to speak on a topic or issue that impacts Greenbelt then it could give council members and residents a false reading as to support for or against an issue. In order to resolve this confusion, we support and suggest that prior to voicing public opinion on any issues impacting Greenbelt that those doing so first state their name and address for the record.

Thank you for your time and consideration as it relates to this matter.

Urge 988 Funding

May is Mental Health Month. By urging my public officials to prioritize suicide prevention, mental health and crisis care, I am hoping to influence collective change to support #MentalHealth4All.

Right now, individuals in crisis are able to call 1-800-273-8255 to reach the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline. The Lifeline provides 24/7, free and confidential support for people in distress and those who care for them. Soon, it will be much easier to remember how to reach the Lifeline as the number will be changing to “988” nationwide by July 2022.

Knowing this, it is critically important that states pass legislation now to reliably fund 988 and their state’s crisis response system, just as we fund 911 and emergency services through small fees on our phone bills. Reliable funding will help to ensure all 988 callers can reach a counselor in their own state who is familiar with and can connect them with local resources. Culturally competent support and local connections can better help all callers through their crisis and in their recovery.

Suicide prevention is important to me because I’ve lost friends to suicide. I have also experienced suicide ideation and have had my own mental health challenges. I know firsthand the importance of treatment, education and advocacy for better mental health.

Join me this month in urging your public officials to fund 988. We all play a role in changing the culture around mental health. Together, we can ensure #MentalHealth4All.

Dem Club Features Delegates Report

by Konrad Herling

Sunday, May 23, 3 p.m., on Zoom is where our 22nd Legislative District representatives will tell us the story of a most productive session. Other states in the country are looking at Maryland, as our state legislature was able to pass a significant police reform bill. It also overturned the Governor’s veto of the Long Gun bill, thus the sale of shotguns and rifles will require background checks. The legislative team of Senator Pinsky and Delegates Healey, Washington and Williams were also key players in passing the Dignity Not Detention bill, which prohibits jurisdictions from contracting with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to detain undocumented people in their local jails. That legislation may be vetoed by Governor Hogan.

Additionally, the state’s legislature education bill, passed on March 28, was created in response to federal legislation which gives state education boards the authority to establish accountability standards. The Governor, according to the Baltimore Sun on April 2, will not veto this bill and will not sign this legislation (citing his concern that no funding was identified). Nonetheless, the law is now effective.

To receive the event’s Zoom link, connect with the organization at Rooseveltclub.com and RSVP as directed or use the calendar page as directed. Those interested in renewing their membership or becoming new members can do so also at the Rooseveltclub.com site. Call club President, Konrad Herling at 301-345-9369 with any questions.

Theater Reopening?

After a long strange winter, spring has sprung and summer is right around the corner! Vaccination rates are going up, Covid-19 cases are going down and many are looking forward to a return to something close to normal. The Old Greenbelt Theatre can’t wait to welcome its patrons back to the theater, and is excited to share the reopening plans with them.

In mid-June, once all staff have had access to full vaccination, the reopening process will begin with a series of strategic test screenings. These audiences will be slightly larger than permitted current rental groups and allow fine-tuning safety protocols and cleaning procedures.

Local Groups Continue Virtual CROP Walk May 2

by Lyn Doyle

Hunger persists, both in the U.S. and overseas. Throughout this year, the CROP Hunger Walk had to be virtual. CROP is the community fundraising arm of Church World Service which is an ecumenical agency fighting hunger and poverty since 1946. The Hyattsville CROP Walk began in 1981 with walkers supported by sponsor donations. In Prince George’s County, Help-By-Phone will receive 25 percent of all funds earned from sponsors.

The rest of the donations will go toward hunger-fighting projects in the U.S. and overseas. Go online to see examples of the project. Two Greenbelt organizations who walked for CROP on Sunday, May 2, were the Golden Age Club and the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club. Those interested in contributing can send a tax-deductible check, made out to CROP, to Judith Davis, c/o City of Greenbelt, 25 Centerway, Greenbelt, MD 20770.

Community Church Collects Sneakers

The Board of Congregational Life at Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ (GCC) is collecting athletic shoes by partnering with GotSneakers. GotSneakers has developed a unique program that asks communities to reach into their closets, and not their pockets. This sneaker recycling program helps keep sneakers out of landfills, which has harmful effects on the environment, and will send the sneakers to countries where the poor often go barefoot out of necessity. For more information about GotSneakers, go to their website at www.GotSneakers.com.

A donation box for sneakers will be placed outside of Fellowship Center, the small building behind the church, for people to drop off sneakers at any time. GotSneakers will pay GCC a varying amount for name-brand and off-brand laced-up sneakers with no tears inside or outside. The company even pays for cleaning and shipping – all GCC does is collect sneakers. “We know that most people have extra sneakers in their closets they would like to donate rather than throw away. An additional incentive is now raising funds to feed the hungry and help the environment. It’s a win-win situation for everybody.”

Scholarship Open

The Boxwood Village Civic Association offers an annual $500 scholarship to a current Boxwood Village resident. CITY OF GREENBELT NOTICE OF A PROPOSED REAL PROPERTY TAX INCREASE

The City Council of the City of Greenbelt proposes to increase real property taxes.

- For the tax year beginning July 1, 2021, the estimated real property assessable base will increase by 4.1%, from $2,158,720,987 to $2,247,288,405.
- If the City of Greenbelt, Maryland maintains the current tax rate of $0.8275 per $100 of assessment, real property tax revenues will increase by 4.1%, resulting in $732,895 of new real property tax revenues.
- In order to fully offset the effect of increasing assessments, the real property tax rate should be reduced to $0.7949, the constant yield tax rate.
- The City is considering not reducing its real property tax rate enough to offset increasing assessments. The City proposes to adopt a real property tax rate of $0.8275 per $100 of assessment. This tax rate is 4.1% higher than the constant yield tax rate and will generate $732,895 in additional property tax revenues.

A public hearing on the proposed real property tax increase will be held at 8 p.m. on Monday, May 24, 2021, virtually via Zoom.

The hearing is open to the public, and public testimony is encouraged. Public participation: Dial-in: 301 715 8592; Meeting ID: 870 1542 0497; Password: 736144

Persons with questions regarding this hearing may call the City Clerk at 301-474-8000 for further information.

Notice of Charter Amendment Resolution

At its regular meeting of April 26, 2021, the City Council adopted a resolution to amend the City Charter. As required by state law, this resolution will be posted in its entirety for 40 days, until June 5, at the Municipal Building and on the City’s Web site www.greenbeltmd.gov. Copies may also be requested of the City Clerk. It will become effective on June 15, 2021, unless a proper petition to submit the amendment to the voters on a referendum is filed as permitted by law. As also required by state law, this notice is given to provide a fair summary of the resolution.

Charter Amendment Resolution Number 2021-1 (Resolution Number 2091) A Resolution of the City of Greenbelt, Maryland, to Amend Section 2 of the Charter of the City of Greenbelt, to amend Section 27 titled “Absentee Voting” by replacing with “Mail-In Voting” of the Greenbelt City Charter.

Purpose: To amend the City Charter to replace absentee voting with mail-in voting. Mail-in voting would allow voters to request a ballot (no reasons needed) to vote in the upcoming 2021 Council Election. However, the voters will still have the option to participate in early voting or in-person voting on Election Day.

The awards were presented to the students by the ACE liaisons of their respective schools. These members include Gordon Gainer, vice-chair of ACE, Don Rich, Janet Mirsky, Kate McIlhenny, Veronica Martin-Alston and Jon Gardner. There are three other members of ACE: Elsie Waynes, who was unable to attend that night; the liaison from the Youth Advisory Committee, Jackson Tuthill and the city staff liaison, Liz Park.

The purpose of the awards was to recognize Greenbelt students who honor the city's traditions of citizenship, leadership and academic achievement. The Student Awards complement the Educator Awards, which ACE presented to teachers and staff members from Greenbelt schools in March.

The honored students all received certificates of recognition from the city, the county and the state. From ACE, each of the elementary and middle school students received a $25 gift card and the graduating ERHS winners each received a $2,500 scholarship.

Magnolia Elementary

The first 2021 ACE student award winner was from Magnolia Elementary School. Fifth grader Brianna Obeng Agyei was recognized as an exemplary Talented and Gifted (TAG) scholar in all subjects. Jelani Thomas-Kamara was also recognized from Magnolia as an ACE award recipient.

Greenbelt Elementary

The next recipient was Vincent Oseafiana from Greenbelt Elementary School, described as a wonderfully ambitious and capable student who consistently demonstrates strong, positive personal values and sets an excellent example for other students. Also awarded from Greenbelt Elementary was Magali Ngumesone. After being introduced and awarded, Ngumesone gave a speech about her gratitude in receiving this award. "I'm so truly honored . . . your outstanding and meaningful action has sparked a chain reaction in me to excel even better in the future."

Springhill Lake Elementary

Awarded from Springhill Lake Elementary was Zainab Ahmad. ACE member Mirsky described Ahmad as not only dedicated to doing the absolute best she can in all areas of her academic life, but as doing so with grace, kindness and a deep love of creativity. The next winner from Springhill Lake was Jaleel Le'Sueur, described as a supportive classmate throughout the virtual learning experience who helps create a positive, cooperative environment and is always willing to offer help to teachers and peers.

French Immersion

The award winner from Dora Kennedy French Immersion was 8th grader Caitlin Anderson, who has proven her ability to complete tasks with favorable results, despite distance learning. Anderson always attends virtual classes prepared to face the challenges of the day and does so with poise, grace and enthusiasm even through these challenging times.

Greenbelt Middle

From Greenbelt Middle School, Chianugo Okeke and Trinity Morgan were both awarded. ACE member Martin-Alston said Okeke "has an unwavering commitment to academic excellence and community outreach" and said of Morgan, "She is a true leader in and out of the classroom. Not only has Trinity excelled academically, she is also active within her community doing wonderful things."

Roosevelt High

The final three awards were given to students from ERHS. Tyler Zeigler, a young woman of exemplary character and a Girl Scout for 11 years, maintained honor roll grades throughout high school. ACE presented Zeigler with a $2,500 educational scholarship in recognition of her accomplishments and to contribute to her future endeavors.

Jennifer Onoha, a senior in ERHS's highly selective and academically demanding Science and Technology Center, is a member of the Debate Team; Girls Varsity Cheerleading Squad; Truth, Love and Character Club; Young Women's Christian Association, a young women's empowerment group; and the Spanish Honor Society. She also received a $2,500 educational scholarship in recognition of her accomplishments and to contribute to her future endeavors.

The final award given was the Delegate's Award, presented by Delegate Anne Healey. The award was presented to Hashem Wahed from ERHS. Healey described Wahed as a person who values hard work, follow-through, getting the job done and doing it to the best of his ability. A passionate, curious, ambitious and industrious student, Wahed also values education and does not take that privilege for granted. "It's the most important thing in his life," said Healey. Wahed was awarded a $500 Scholarship to help him in future studies. Wahed said he was shocked when he first found out he had received this award. "I was working hard, getting my grades up . . . I never really expected someone to notice but apparently I was wrong." He also thanked his mother for always instilling such a strong value of education and hard work in him and all the faculty at ERHS who helped motivate him.

GATe Elects Its New Board: Old Friends and New Faces

by John Campanile

The Greenbelt Access Television (GATe) board elected officers for the 2021/22 term during a special meeting held on April 27.

By unanimous votes by the board, the officers are: Frank Gervasi, president; Ric Gordon, vice-president; Claude Aubert, secretary; and John Campanile, treasurer.

Two new board members were elected during GATe's annual meeting on April 18: Rebecca Holober and Nelea "Lea" Johnson, who were officially welcomed by the entire GATe board.

Holober worked for the Food and Drug Administration as an educational and project management specialist. She has been a member and volunteer with the Utopia Film Festival for many years. Holober plans to use her educational and management background to help develop GATe.

Johnson is currently employed by the City of Glenarden as an executive assistant to their city manager and mayor. She has obtained a Contracts Law II certificate from Yale University and is seeking her degree in business administration from the University of Maryland Global Campus. Johnson has taken editing classes from GATe. A comedy script of hers was a semi-finalist in the Los Angeles Film Festival.

Aubert, who is currently serving as secretary, is returning for his third term on the board. Aubert envisioned and created the Rose Award Contest to increase community involvement. He believes he can help GATe become a more professional organization through collaboratively improving policies and procedures.

Gervasi outlined GATe's mission: "To educate Greenbelt residents with our content and through our classes. We also teach those who are interested in how to produce videos so everyone can tell their stories on television or the internet."

Gordon added: "Through the avenue of GATe, Greenbelters can learn of each other no matter what part of Greenbelt you live in. And we can use GATe to continue to find the common ground and learn from each other."

GATe is available on Verizon channel 19 and Comcast channel 77 or everywhere at GreenbeltAccessTV.org.

Public Safety Groups Move Forward with New Budget

by Matthew Arbach

The public safety budget was under review by the Greenbelt City Council on May 3, bringing together representatives of the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC), Community Animal Response Team (CART), Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department (GVFD) and Animal Shelter. Despite pandemic restrictions, these necessary organizations continue on with their particular mandates in keeping the city safe. As well, representatives of the Greenbelt Police Department (GPD) presented at the meeting, which will be covered in a forthcoming News Review article.

Laura Kressler, chair of PSAC (also Team leader of CART, co-leader of CERT and spokesperson for both groups), informed council that due to the pandemic, its funds for Fiscal Year 2020-2021 remain unspent due to a cessation of their face-to-face approach. Yet, said Kressler in a city memo, “the committee does plan to look into alternative types of outreach we can do this year to replace our normal activities,” such as virtual programs. Their normal activities include National Night Out and the Labor Day public safety booth and information day activities. Kressler asked for a repeat amount of $900 for the new fiscal year, which will go for educational materials like brochures, magnets, safety whistles and lights.

Kressler said that PSAC has come to the end of its review of Mayor Colin Byrd’s Fair and Just Policing Act, a report on which will soon be made available to council, which Byrd said he was grateful to hear. Byrd felt that the new state policing laws will have a bearing as well and advised that council may need to move ahead with the legislation before the report is received.

Resident Bill Orleans and Councilmember Rodney Roberts felt that drafts of the report should be considered public information in order to stimulate the forthcoming debate. Councilmembers Emmett Jordan, Edward Putens and Silke Pope were comfortable with PSAC waiting to disclose its report until its completion. Kressler said that their process has been transparent, with screen shares from their open meetings available.

CERT

CERT has 20 active members, 70 percent of whom are residents. CERT requests $150 mostly for health supplies, cheaper background checks for the city’s new identification cards and related trainings, such as a lost person class. CERT looks to improve its computer systems and assistance to the community and the police department.

CERT has been highly focused on Covid-19 pandemic-related response activities, including: grocery shopping and rides to medical appointments for seniors; staffing the FEMA mass vaccination site; assistance to the county’s Office of Emergency Management (OEM), surge response and the Maryland Responds Medical Reserve Corps, Prince George’s County Unit as well as educational outreach ef-orts related to the pandemic.

CERT has also been a significant part of the National Capital Region Virtual Emergency Response Team (VERT), an initiative spearheaded by its Montgomery County CERT sister organization, which includes 20 organizations and 120 digital volunteers.

CART

Kressler informed the meeting that CART has 19 active members, 68 percent of whom are residents. Like CERT, CART has been part of many Covid-19 initiatives. The CERTCON 2021 conference held virtually this fall will enable CART members to train for “a real-life disaster response situation.” Your Dog’s Friend Foundation provided training in a wide spectrum of dog-related subjects like behavior, emergencies and communication between dog and owner. Other trainings were health-related, like Stop the Bleed and CPR for humans and animals. CART has been highly involved in FEMA training.

CART requested $1,500, to be used for health supplies and improvement of their IT systems.

Kressler said that a CART disaster response trailer “is currently in the finalization stage,” with its delivery imminent in the next few months. CART’s goals include more emergency outreach and public-private partnerships, increased recruitment and training of members, and more effective notification systems and operating procedures for members.

Fire Department

Chief Thomas Ray and Deputy Chief Greg Gigliotti summarized the budget needs and status of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department. In spite of a legislative error, the department still expects county money for a new fire engine in mid-May. The station is in need of interior/exterior repairs as well as a new HVAC run-stop control system. Gigliotti was unsure which of these would be a county or city expense and committed to research the topic. Ray said that currently the balance for ambulance fees is at $180,000 with council hoping it will be used for fuel and maintenance.

Gigliotti advised more of a city-led approach to creating a new fire station (a move to the location of the Armory has been considered by the city), as using county funds would exert county control over management and staff.

Shelter and Dog Park

Animal Control Supervisor Nelly Ortiz and Police Chief Richard Bowers presented on behalf of the animal shelter and dog park. Currently there are two animal control officers, one for each of the day and evening shifts with another full-time and half-time employee being sought. Budget needs include a replacement vehicle, animal care costs and upkeep on the shelter itself.

Bowers said that patrolling of the Dog Park is the main issue, to make sure proper use and registration is being followed. Thirty Dog Park permits have been issued with a total revenue of $400. Bowers and Pope urged residents to notify GPD of any improper activity at the Dog Park, with Bowers stressing that so far, no illegal incidents have been reported. The Dog Park continues to remain unlocked.

New Firefly Sanctuary Opens In Stream Valley Park

by Melinda Thompson

Mary Ann Canter poses at the Firefly sanctuary.

In Stream Valley Park behind Northway, the new Firefly Sanctuary is now officially open.. Tall green grass and a stream provide the perfect habitat for fireflies.

Mary Ann Canter led the group that wanted to add a firefly sanctuary to Greenbelt as a way to make saving the fireflies a permanent endeavor. She said that the main cause of the dwindling number was habitat loss and the sanctuary has been created to provide an open area.

“We let the edges go a little rough, so they’re not mowing quite as much which should help the fireflies, and we’ve had great weather and nice rain,” Canter said. “So, I think that we’ll have a really beautiful display this year.”

Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll the environmental coordinator with the Department of Public Works said that right now the fireflies are in the larva or pupa stage where they eat small insects and then burrow underground before emerging as adults.

“I suspect the majority of species will begin the pupa stage within the next few weeks and emerge as adults in late May to mid-June,” Carpenter-Driscoll said.

Carpenter-Driscoll has been working on adding signage to the sanctuary telling people what it is and reminding crews not to spray or mow the area.

The sanctuary is in a part of the park that does not have any lights.

“If you have lights, you have no fireflies,” Canter said. “Because they can’t see each other and they use their lights to find their mate.”

Canter said in the future, she would like to see more signage informing the public about the stages of a firefly’s life.

She also said that in the future she is hoping to promote firefly sanctuaries to other parks in Greenbelt where there are currently a lot of fireflies. She wants to work on outreach and the possibility of having an event to look at the fireflies and inform people about them.

As the summer comes closer, she says, make sure to mark your calendars for early June so that you can see the fireflies light up the night sky.

The Community Vaccination Center opened in parking lot 1A of the Greenbelt Metro station on April 7. This facility has the capacity to administer 3,000 doses of Covid-19 vaccine every day. In the time since the center opened, staff have provided more than 75,000 vaccinations to residents.

Register for an appointment by visiting covidvax.maryland.gov or calling: 1-855-MD-GOVAX (1-855-634-6829). Anyone younger than 18 must be accompanied by a parent or guardian to receive a vaccination.

Falloff in Demand

The FEMA site, however, is apparently seeing at least some falloff in new vaccinations (see story on this page). The blaze of publicity surrounding the FEMA site, the highly accessible Beltway location and its extended hours may have siphoned some of the crowds from Cheverly but an overall drop in new recipients is apparently being felt at both sites.

It is likely that individuals motivated to be vaccinated and with the resources to get themselves in the queue have now poured in the doors. But a more flexible and imaginative approach is needed to reach the substantial group whose work patterns, language, immigration status, transportation issues, fears or misinformation make vaccination more problematic. Government at the state and local level seems to be moving in this direction. In addition, because facilities are operated by different organizations, coordination is essential to not overreact to the decrease.

Boosting Demand

Governor Larry Hogan recently announced plans to incentivize state employees to get shots and potentially other large government and private sector employers will provide work site immunizations or incentives. Schools could also be focal points for vaccination as the eligible age groups get younger. As an example of what can be done, the county health department recently held an innovative 24-hour vaccine-a-thon at the Wayne K. Curry Sports and Learning Center.

The county this week also launched an outreach campaign to bring vaccines to the reluctant, underserved or transportation challenged. The county expects to individually contact over 200,000 eligible residents by phone, text or going door to door. Greenbelt is not targeted for this activity initially, but most neighboring municipalities are on the list.

Still Below Par

The number of Prince Georgians (population ~900,000) fully vaccinated stands at about 250,000, with about 100,000 still heading for their second shot and 20,000 who received single-shot vaccines. This means that about 370,000 residents are either fully vaccinated or in the pipeline to be vaccinated as of May 11 (though officials at the Cheverly site noted anecdotally that second shot recipients had a higher rate of no-shows). That leaves over 300,000 eligible residents (not counting those under 16) who have received no vaccine at all.

One and Done

To bring shots to underserved populations and include those who are reluctant or fearful, the focus will likely be on using single-shot vaccines. The county has several health department vans heading out into neighborhoods to catch people in their place of work or worship, while shopping or at home but this is inevitably a low-volume (if essential) means of distribution and the one-shot regimes require much less logistical support.

A Volunteer's View

Manning Vaccination Clinics

by Cathie Meetre

As a Maryland Responds Medical Reserve Corps volunteer, I have been assigned to both an outdoor Covid-19 testing site in Hyattsville (in February, brrrr...) and more recently to the vaccination clinic at Prince George's Health Department in Cheverly, just across from the Prince George's Hospital Center. Both test and vaccination sites exhibited the same pattern. Initially besieged by those desiring tests, the Hyattsville test site's attendance dwindled from about 200 tests per day with cars overflowing the parking lot, to a handful until it was closed. The health department site seems to be headed in the same direction. (See also the story on page 1 relating to the scheduled change in services at the Greenbelt Metro FEMA vax site.)

The Cheverly facility is operating well below capacity. Volunteers who had served there since it opened said that the first several weeks they were constantly on the run. Every seat in the extensive facility was full and the line stretched around the building. This was not a walk-up clinic – everybody had an appointment and they were still bursting at the seams. At the peak in mid-March to mid-April, they were vaccinating about 600 individuals per day with 11 rooms each vaccinating non-stop.

Demand Is Down

Fast forward to Thursday, May 6, when I was scheduled at Cheverly for the first time. The facility had only 60 appointments scheduled for the whole day, meaning over 500 potential appointments were going begging. Volunteers were twiddling their thumbs and though vaccination rooms were down to six, nurses were popping out of their quarters questing for arms to stick.

Vaccine Batches

When people had to wait, it wasn't because of the crowds, it was so that a vial of vaccine that served six people (Pfizer) or 11 people (Moderna) could be guaranteed to be completely used up without waste during its span of viability or by the end of the day. With the low turnout, sometimes it was nearly two hours before a quorum was assembled – resulting in the last arrival for the vial getting his or her vaccination immediately while others with earlier appointments waited for an hour or more, despite efforts by staff calling recipients to come in earlier than scheduled.

Pfizer vaccine was in plentiful supply, but the word was that Moderna was running low. There were fewer Moderna second-shot patients coming in so several were rescheduled to other days to avoid opening a new vial. For some Moderna recipients, this was not their first rescheduling.

Hold 'em or Fold 'em

At the very end of the day, the receptionist phoned a patient to confirm he was arriving shortly because he was the last person needed to liberate a vial of Pfizer vaccine – for which five other people had been patiently waiting quite a while. He said, “Yes, I’m already here – just coming in.” So the vial was opened and shots commenced. When his name was called, however, he was nowhere to be found. A second phone call established (with some difficulty) that he was, in fact, just signing in at the Sports and Fitness Center clinic about 10 minutes away – the wrong “here.”

But it's a cliff-hanger. Did he use up the last shot? Did a shot go to waste? Did he stay at Sports and Fitness? Only The Shadow knows – because I went home.

May 4, 8:50 a.m., 7400 block Greenway Center Drive. Two women were involved in a traffic altercation when one of the motorists exited her vehicle and allegedly sprayed the other woman's vehicle with what she believed to be pepper spray. They were advised to obtain warrants.

Fraud
May 1, 5 p.m., 100 block Northway. A man put a letter containing a check in the U.S. Postal Service mailbox at Hillside Road and Northway on March 10. Unknown person(s) gained possession of it, altered the amount and the name of the payee, and deposited the check into a bank account.

Theft
April 30, 11:21 a.m., 7415 Greenbelt Road. A credit card was taken after a locker at LA Fitness was broken into. It was used later to make unauthorized purchases.

Trespassing
April 30, 11:27 a.m., 6000 block Greenbelt Road. A non-resident man was arrested and charged with trespassing after he was found on the grounds of Beltway Plaza after having been banned from the mall by agents of the property. He was released on citation pending trial.

Vandalism
May 3, 6:28 p.m., 5921 Cherrywood Terrace. A man saw a juvenile use a rock to break out the bedroom window of his residence. He then spoke with the parent, who handled the incident.

Burglary
April 29, 5:33 a.m., 7541 Greenbelt Road. A forced entry was made into Starbucks. It is not known if anything was taken.
April 29, 5:46 a.m., 7555 Greenbelt Road. A forced entry was made into Subway and a cash register was taken.

Peeping Tom
May 1, 11:18 p.m., 6600 block Lake Park Drive. A woman said a man was looking in her condominium window. She believes she knows who the man is. An investigation is ongoing.

Vehicle Crime
One vehicle was stolen. A black 2013 Toyota Camry with Maryland tags 5CR2213 was taken from 9342 Edmonston Road on May 3.

Four vehicles were recovered, two by Metropolitan Police. A Honda XR650LM motorcycle taken from Mandan Road was located in the 600 block O Street, N.W., in D.C. and a 2010 Honda Accord taken from the 9200 block Springhill Lane was found in the 2000 block Ridgecrest Court, S.E., Washington, D.C.

A 2005 Nissan Murano stolen April 30 from 8106 Mandan Road was recovered the next day in the 7500 block Mandan Road. A 2012 Honda Civic reported stolen March 7 from the 9200 block Edmonston Road was recovered April 30 by Prince George's County Police in Lanham. The tags on the vehicle at the time of theft, Virginia VMV2980, were not recovered and are still out as stolen.

Front tags were taken from two vehicles, one in the 9100 block Springhill Lane and the other in the 6200 block Greenbelt Road.

Driver side airbags were removed from four vehicles after windows were broken to gain access. These were taken from 7700 and 7722 Hanover Parkway and 7809 and 7821 Mandan Road.

Handicap placards were taken from two vehicles on Mandan Road, 7801 and 7821, after windows were broken out to gain entry.

A window was broken out at 8150 Lakecrest Drive and military equipment was removed and a wallet was removed at 9110 Edmonston Road.

Victim Identified
The man who had been pronounced deceased from gunshot wounds on Tuesday, May 4, in the 9100 block of Springhill Lane, in a report in last week's Police Blotter, has been identified as Kennedy Nwabueze Ogbonna, a 29-year-old Greenbelt resident. An investigation is ongoing.

Playing Together Again: Outdoor Band

Eleanor Roosevelt High School band students have started meeting outdoors after school in small groups, in order to play together after more than a year of virtual band class. Students are spaced six feet apart and wear special masks with a flap through which the instrument mouthpiece can be inserted, as well as bell covers to filter the air coming out of the end of the instrument. Despite the challenges of masks, and the need for many clothespins to stop the music blowing off the stands, the students and band teacher Rachel Zephir are delighted to be able to make music together again in person.

are described. The comments also include DEIS postponement of geophysical and geotechnical analysis, though analysis of soil and the subsurface strata are a significant factor in design (especially of tunnels and bridges) from the very earliest stages. She pondered how alignments could have been chosen without considering such factors.

Strategy
Part of carrying the day is strategic planning to capitalize on any potential advantages and to be ready to respond to setbacks. Grant's strategy incorporates a series of fallbacks. They want to win in the first round with a strongly-supported recommendation to pursue the no-build option. If, however, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) decides to go ahead, Grant's first fallback recommends a new DEIS be required since the current one is so flawed. Her second level of fallback is that requested information must be delivered and that the comment period should be extended to accommodate that – at least buying time.

Lining up the Ducks
Grant pointed out that the comments are so detailed for a number of reasons. One is that they make the point that, "The city is really serious about the project and not just making a position statement." She also notes that the level of detail and thoroughness provide a deterrent because of the work required to counter the well-documented objections. Lastly, if the city wants to appeal, it has all the groundwork needed to immediately request an injunction to stop any work taking place. If the project moves forward regardless, the countering evidence must be available immediately, because once work starts, it's too late. She also noted that to appeal an issue, it must be raised during the comment period.

Grant was frankly amazed by the recent communique from Baltimore Washington Rapid Rail (BWRR) that the Spellman overpass, cited in the DEIS as being demolished, was in fact safe. But she emphasized that this information cannot be relied upon as jurisdiction lies with the FRA and not with BWRR.
Councilmembers were enthusiastic about the report. Councilmember Judith Davis wanted to deliver a copy in person to U.S. Representative Steny Hoyer and Senators Ben Cardin and Chris Van Hollen. She noted that she hoped reference was made to the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, which as a resident noted "would slow them up by two years," by requiring an analysis of intentional bird take which would result from the effects of the disturbance around the tunnel entrance.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts mentioned there were five different projects affecting the Beaver Dam Creek which were being considered piecemeal. He was assured that they were all included in the brief.
Other council activities at this meeting will be summarized in a later issue.

#1 in Sales For Greenbelt in 2020!

cemetery and the Greenbelt Connection.

Accomplishments

The budget document identifies pages of accomplishments from the mundane “painted all the yellow curbs in Franklin Park” to the impressive “achieved the highest point total ever since the Sustainable Maryland program’s inception.” Readers are encouraged to view the budget document online to see the full range of the department’s accomplishments.

Covid-19

Public Works was a key player in the city’s response to the pandemic. Staff designed, fabricated and installed the plexiglass sneeze guards that have sprouted up throughout city facilities, redesigned some workspaces to allow distancing and continued essential services such as refuse collection. Parks maintenance was possibly the only department where staff could not work from home. Work was redesigned fairly quickly to allow all workers to go about their business while maintaining social distancing. The pandemic also changed how staff cleaned city facilities, Public Works Director James Sterling reported. Department management is constantly preparing as if city buildings were opening tomorrow, which, he noted, comes at a cost. They also took advantage of buildings being largely empty to conduct repairs and improvements that would otherwise be difficult, such as installing a water filtration system in the Youth Center, where water quality had been acceptable, according to tests, but was discolored and unappetizing in appearance.

Infrastructure

In the current fiscal year, no capital projects were performed unless funded by grants. Thus, the proposed projects are the same as those proposed for the current year. The department has established an equipment life cycle, a replacement schedule and replacement cost estimates for each city facility. Money will need to be allocated for these projects and other needed capital improvements, Sterling said. He urged that the city resurface at least one mile of street each year. With 26 miles of streets maintained by the city, this would create a 26-year re-pavement cycle.

Sustainability

Sustainability continues to be a departmental focus. Currently, all the electricity the city uses is from wind. By the fall of 2022 he expects that the solar farm project will be in operation, which will offset 80 to 90 percent of the current electrical consumption. The department is shifting from gas-powered to electric-powered vehicles and equipment to the extent possible. Staff must prove that there is no electric-powered alternative before purchasing gas-powered equipment. The purchase of electric leaf blowers, chain saws and the like has been popular, Sterling reported, as they are generally lighter than the gas-powered equivalent. However, there is some equipment for which there is yet no acceptable electric option such as large chain saws and pickup trucks used for snow and ice removal.

Staffing

Sterling reported that Public Works is currently seeking to fill three supervisor positions with another retirement expected by the end of the year. As part of this process, they are evaluating the department’s current needs and operations and modifying the job responsibilities in response. He expects that the organization chart will look much different in the FY23 budget document. No additional positions are requested. Sterling noted, however, that the department will be taking on the maintenance of Greenbelt Station rights-of-way and park areas. In addition, remaining Sustainable Maryland Certified imposes additional workload and the no-spray pesticide policy has created more manual labor to maintain the city parks. At some point, he said, these needs will require additional staffing to maintain the current level of services.

Waste Collection

The FY21 adopted budget had projected a $29,800 loss in the waste collection and disposal budget. The department did somewhat better, losing $9,900. A larger loss ($52,500) is projected for the next fiscal year. No increase in fees is requested.

Greenbelt Connection

Demand for rides remains high. Sterling said that on weekdays it is hard to get a ride unless the resident makes a reservation several days in advance. When asked by Councilmember Silke Pope if the city could increase the range of the service, taking residents further afield, Sterling noted that it would be difficult to maintain the schedule if the buses go further away.

Fares remain unchanged with seniors paying $1 per ride and others paying $2. The connection consistently operates at a deficit with fares bringing in $7,400. Tax revenue pays the remaining $118,700.

Since the city is currently using Berwyn Heights’ connection bus, Councilmember Rodney Roberts wondered if the city could operate both buses regularly, rather than using the second bus as a backup. Sterling noted that the budget does not cover the cost of a second driver, which Mayor Colin Byrd immediately requested to add to the list of possible additions for discussion at the May 17 final budget work-session.

Other Additions

Councilmember Judith Davis asked that a “tree canopy enhancement program” be added to the list of possible additions. This program would pay residents to plant trees.

JC Landscaping

- Beds Trenched and Mulched,
- Annuals, Flowers, Perennials,
- Ornamental shrubs and trees installed,
- Small tree removal.
- Shrubs and small trees trimmed and pruned. New lawn seeding or sod.

A steady stream of people enjoyed the first market of the season. All the early vegetables were aplenty and the star of the show was the scarce but delicious early strawberries. Although masks were still required, the atmosphere in this Covid-19 year was markedly more open feeling and most people seemed sufficiently inured to their masks that there were no sore moments.

A Walk with a Naturalist Opens Eyes, Ears and Mind

by Kyla Hanington

To walk with Graeme Simpson is to be brought into awareness and wonder about the world around you at the micro-level. Plants like the grasses at Buddy Attick Park and the clover, Graeme told me, attract butterflies like the eastern tiger swallowtail, cabbage moth and skippers. I nodded as he talked, as though I knew what skippers were, as though I understood clover to be anything other than something I wish I could find four leaves of.

I thought Dan and I were meeting Graeme, a world-renowned nature photographer originally from New Zealand and current resident of Greenbelt, to talk about his observations about litter around Greenbelt Lake, but what happened instead was that Graeme introduced Dan and me to something magical and life-altering; in just a few minutes he brought us into glorious wonder and enthusiasm about everything around us. “This is a white oak, your state tree,” Graeme said, pointing out the beautiful tree we were standing beneath.

Mostly I just tried to nod and keep up, as Graeme gently showed us an empty robin’s nest in a bush low to the ground. “This was an inexperienced robin,” he said, explaining that she had laid five eggs and just in the last two days a snake had gotten to them. “But she’ll learn and when she lays another batch this summer she’ll lay them higher, in a tree,” and he waved his hand toward the many trees that surrounded us. The story about the egg loss not a sad one, then, but one of hope.

Graeme showed us wild garlic mustard, which people harvest at the lake for their salads. He showed us the beginnings of the nest of a Baltimore oriole and described how the birds build them. He pointed out black locust trees, covered in white blossoms; tulip poplar trees; American hollies that attract ruby- and golden-crowned kinglets; fringe trees; freshly planted milkweed by the forebay that will soon attract monarchs; mimosa trees; wild strawberries; and Japanese honeysuckle. There we paused as Graeme drew our attention to the songs of migratory warblers in the woods just beyond. As he showed us plants, he talked about what birds use them, pointed out a fox’s den, told us how green herons, of which there is frequently one at the lake, are toolmakers, catching dragonflies they then use to lure fish.

Graeme also showed us garbage. On his walks around Greenbelt Lake he collects litter, and on our walk he wore a rubber glove on one hand so he could stoop and gather what he called micro-litter as we passed. “Cigarette butts have been increasing,” he told us. “They get in the tummies of the waterfowl...so they think they are full, and they die.” Graeme told us about some of the migratory waterfowl we might see: ruddy ducks, wood ducks, hooded mergansers, common loons and more. I thought of them with a cigarette butt or two in the stomach, filling them up, and started paying more attention to spotting micro-litter myself, so I could collect it and dispose of it to keep the birds and animals we look forward to seeing a bit more safe.

Graeme told us, “We have a mallard on the lake – and she’s a really good mother at the moment, looking after nine little ducklings. And she has a hook that’s gone right through the top beak. Experts have come to see and they can’t catch her, because if they take her away to fix it the young ducklings won’t survive.” He stooped to pick up a plastic water bottle. “That’s what happens, you see, when there are hooks and things left behind.”

Graeme told us he picks up hundreds of cellophane wrappers from the straws of juice boxes, noting that people are so careful to throw their juice boxes away but drop the plastic wrapper on the ground. While we were with him, he found several, along with plastic bottle caps and plastic rings those caps attach to, which birds swallow or get trapped around their necks, respectively. On the peninsula there were two different bags of dog waste; some owner had been mindful enough to pick up after their dog and then left the plastic bag with nicely sealed poo in it on the ground. Dan said, “I want to ask them, who are they leaving that for?” There is no sealed-bag-of-dog-poo collector, and yet this garbage, like so much of what we saw, was dropped within 30 feet or so of a visible garbage can.

There are local fishers Graeme sees every day who are incredibly mindful of their hooks and lines, who clean up as they go, but others who come by for a day or two are less careful, frustrating regulars and damaging birds. Graeme showed us fishing line he’d picked up earlier in the morning. “This gets around the neck of the state bird, the Baltimore oriole. They use it for nesting material, and their little feet get stuck in the line.”

He cleans up around the lake regularly. “It’s a natural thing in New Zealand,” he explained, “an idealism that you want to walk everywhere without seeing litter on the ground.” But he is not the only person focused on cleaning up around Greenbelt Lake, naming regulars he sees who also pick up litter as they go. He said that they pick up about 2,500 pieces of micro-litter every five days, while in other parks of the same size there could be as much as 25,000 pieces.

“I try to lead by example,” he told us, as he stepped down an embankment to collect yet another plastic water bottle, “and people do see me cleaning up and make an effort to clean up, too.” The story of litter around Greenbelt Lake not a sad one then, but one of hope. Dan and I now see the Lake in a new light, flush with birds, wild strawberries and tiny pieces of litter we will collect and put safely where they belong.
